

Appendix 1: Service directory

The NSW Health Centre for Genetics Education website houses the clinical genomics service directory for general and specialist clinical services.

Search if the home address is within local health district (LHD) with the NSW Health LHD map.

Prenatal specialised services focused on providing information and support regarding testing and screening during pregnancy are provided by most local health districts through maternal fetal medicine units and genetic services as appropriate.

Patients from Albury are referred to Victoria services, patients from Broken Hill are referred to South Australia services. Patients from the Tweed area for prenatal and fetal medicine services are referred to Queensland services.

The following table displays general and cancer genetic services by LHD and specialty health network (SHN). It includes differentiation of metropolitan centres and outreach services, rural and regional genetic counsellor led services.
